

Bomb Threat Recorder

The Bomb Threat Recorder is a system of recording telephone conversations in the case of Bomb Threat, or for training purposes.

The recorder unit is connected across the telephone line, or interconnected at the analogue speech path of a digital phone. The audible conversation is connected to the recorder and a button on the unit is used to remotely start the recording. (Item No. 1100)

VOX-Line Interface Unit

The VOX Line Interface Unit is similar to Item No. 1110 but is powered by a plug pack and monitors the line for voice activity. When an audio signal is on the line a relay contact is closed. This contact can be used to activate a recorder or similar device.
